JORDAN LORENCE

Jordan Lorence is Senior Counsel with Alliance Defending Freedom. Lorence has litigated cases defending the freedom of speech, religious liberty, and other constitutional rights since 1984. He argued the Southworth case before the United States Supreme Court, representing students who challenged the requirement by the University of Wisconsin that they pay mandatory fees that funded private organizations advocating ideas the students opposed.

Lorence led the litigation challenging New York City's policy banning private worship services in vacant public schools during non-school hours, while allowing virtually all other types of meetings by community groups. He also represented Elane Photography of New Mexico which was sued for discrimination for declining to create photographs that told the story of a commitment ceremony by two women. Lorence is a graduate of the University of Minnesota Law School and Stanford University in California. Lorence also appeared as a contestant on Jeopardy!
