Knowing the law is essential – but so is being able to communicate about it. Join writing coach and former attorney Rick Horowitz for a lively and practical day-long seminar that will reintroduce you to your legal-writing toolbox, including a few tools you didn’t know were in there. This class explores the fundamentals (and the critical details) of creating clear, well-organized, persuasive legal documents. Briefs, memos, client letters, even daily correspondence benefit from your deeper understanding of what goes into successful writing, so we’ll examine good and not-so-good writing to see what worked, what didn’t, and why.

This class is offered on the following dates: July 26, August 23, September 27
