

AMY JEFFRESS

Amy Jeffress is a partner in the White Collar Defense group and co-chair of the National Security practice in Arnold & Porter's Washington office. She advises companies and individuals on investigations and criminal defense matters. She has extensive experience with FCPA, export enforcement, FARA, handling classified information, and mutual legal assistance and other international law enforcement issues, including extradition and INTERPOL notices. She has also assisted many clients with congressional investigations. Before joining the firm, Ms. Jeffress served as the Justice Department Attaché to the US Embassy in London, where she coordinated cooperation between the US and the UK on criminal matters. She previously served as Counselor to the Attorney General, advising the Attorney General and senior Department leadership and interfacing regularly with the White House and National Security Council, the intelligence community, and other agencies on national security investigations and prosecutions and international matters. From 1996 to 2009 she was an Assistant US Attorney in the District of Columbia, where she tried more than 40 cases and served as Chief of the National Security Section, conducting and supervising investigations and prosecutions of international and domestic terrorism, espionage, export control violations, and other crimes related to national security.