

MARK JOHNSON-LEWIS

Mark joined the DC Bar Foundation in October 2018, as Evaluation and Impact Manager. Mark oversees the Foundation's evaluation activities to articulate and measure DCBF's impact in the civil legal justice community. He also works with DCBF's Director of Programs to strategize and design programming to best serve the District and then evaluate how those programs are delivering and if they are working well. Among other things, he oversees the evaluation of the Civil Legal Counsel Projects Program, the Family Law Learning Network, and emerging network building activity. Mark has more than 25 years of experience building the capacity of individuals and organizations by engaging more effectively in strategic partnerships and networks. Within the arenas of workforce development, teacher preparation, health professions education and college access, the focus has been on building strong sustainable relationships.